Oasis Fans - They are ALL Scams Other (self.Tickets)soumis il y a 16 jours par BubbleAndSqueak88

I hate to break it to you (and myself) but every post here is a scam. I was just about to transfer money to one person on Reddit as they had sent me video proof of tickets, and their passport, but I questioned why the name was a known diplomat when googled. Maybe they were named after them - checked Google and other people were.

So they sent me a video saying they weren't a scammer. This matched the passport.

I now have video proof of the tickets (showing my whatsapp and their TM app), their ID, a video from them - BUT then they say they can't accept Paypal Good and Services. Earlier they said they would via their friends account but now their friend isn't around.

Okay fine - send me your bank account details that match that passport. They want me to transfer to their girlfriend though, which is fine, but I still want to check their details and they don't send them.

I then respond to another similar post and add that person to whatsapp and it's the same freaking number.

Unbelievable what some people will do for 180 quid. And yes, typing this out I realised I should have shut it down sooner. I just have hope that there is one person that won't try to make so much profit off the tickets and sell them to a proper fan. I think I'll be having an Oasis party at home this weekend. Stay safe people!

Users to avoid - Icy-Bar-4375 and maxpayne657 + 20 or so others I've spoken to in the last week.

I would say everyone here is scammer, or at least 99%.

Because if anyone has got genuine tickets and is willing to sell them, Twickets and Ticketmaster Resale is their choice. If they want to make money out of it, there is Viagogo, StubHub and Co. If they don't want to use those platforms, there still is Ticketswap.

But if they don't own any ticket and want to get money out of nothing, they'd come here.

Even if the person's Reddit account is not brandnew and have a lot of karma points, they deleted everything, the entire history. Because it's a hacked account and they want to hide that aspect. Most of the scammers have multiple accounts.

Unfortunately you are right, and this morning I am coming to terms with the reality that I won't be seeing Oasis this summer (something I have wanted for nearly 30 years). I have seen one or two genuine sellers on Reddit, but I am shocked with the infestation of scammers on this sub, and very angry with Admin's incapacity/unwillingness to delete their accounts from the sub.

I guess ultimately, if I had tickets to sell I would put them on Twickets. As an act of courtesy to fellow Redditors, I would make an announcement that they would be going live at a specific time, and to get ready etc. I certainly wouldn't do a transaction directly with a fellow Redditor, I mean why would anyone? It's not worth the arsing around providing evidence to prove you're real when you can just put them on Twickets and see them vanish in a matter of seconds.

To the scammer list, you can add OK_Bridge8140 and ACL-25.

I just have to hope that rumours of 4x Etihad gigs next year are true, learn lessons from the Ticketmaster debacle last year, and just hope my dream finally comes true.

This goes with anything you buy using PayPal. Do not ever send via friends & family unless you know the person. It's an absolute lie that they can't accept via goods & services. They claim there is a delay in receiving the money, that's absolutely false.

I got very lucky in July, 8pm the night before I got a message from a genuine person, met them the next day face to face and the rest is history.

Earlier that day I had tried to transfer money and PayPal had - thankfully - blocked it for some reason. I'd entered into half a dozen conversations with scammers on here. It's disgusting. I'm now obsessed with calling them out on here, I hate to think of someone desperate like I was getting conned. Scum. Well done making this post

If you're not already, join any Oasis subs and watch those closely from a couple days before. I'm not an oasis fan but I have bought tickets (meeting in person) for other bands sold out shows via reddit on the day of the show from last minute dropouts etc. With such large events there's always inevitably some people who have family or work emergencies that stop then going last minute. Obviously you still need to be hyper aware of scammers but if they're real they will usually meet you, or accept goods and services at least. But yeah follow the main band sub(s) too

This.

If they won't accept in person or PayPal G&S then it's a scam. Period.

They might say they will but then bait and switch, because they know people are desperate. Don't fall for it.

There have been a tonne of posts in the last week or so and they're all scams. Posters with no history on reddit, signed up in the last week or two. One was even saying "check my comment history" but they had no comments and had signed up a week ago.

They're scammers. If they had tickets they would sell them on twickets (where the bots will slurp them up) or StubHub / Viagogo where they're guaranteed to sell as prices there are now going up!

I guarantee every single person selling Oasis tickets on reddit is scammer. Or perhaps 99% are - do you want to take that gamble?

perma-lien embed enregistrer signaler répondre

[–] Strange-Bit-6020 2 points il y a 15 jours*

Even with PayPal Goods & Services, you can still get scammed. Scammers often send a PDF or screenshot of a ticket that looks legit — but:

- it's been sold to multiple people
- it's a Photoshop fake

The worst part: PDFs are considered digital goods, and PayPal sometimes denies refund claims for digital items, since it's hard to prove the ticket was fake. You might only find out at the venue - when it's too late

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent signaler répondre

[–] leejo 3 points il y a 15 jours

Indeed, and the advice there is to make sure it's a ticketmaster transfer only and make sure you pay using a credit card so even if PayPal won't refund then you can chargeback through your card company.

I'll repeat what I said though: 99% on here are scammers, so don't even think about it.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent signaler répondre

[–] Strange-Bit-6020 3 points il y a 15 jours

Agreed!

If someone is in need for tickets, I would try Viagogo - it's risky, too, but I guess the chance of getting a valid ticket is at 80% - not 0,1% as here in Reddit.

Paypal refunded me when I got scammed. It does take a few weeks and you want to be very specific in your dispute request on what happened and explicitly list the day time and seats in the item description, but they will get your money back

I did buy 2x tickets from an individual from here, but needed to talk to 9 scammers before that. I think they are fairly easy to spot though.

I think the best way to verify is to ask to connect via linkedin / IG and verify the other person is legit with a legit story why they are selling the tickets. No scammer is able to provide a good backstory and legit online profiles.

Also immediate red flag is too low asking price or lack of detail, real people ask for something close to market prices and can provide quickly detailed info.

Seems some scammers are ok with Paypal GS so that is not enough to prove legitimacy.

I've spent 4 days trying to get my Mrs a standing ticket for tomorrow from Twickets and managed to secure 1 yesterday. A few standings have come up and loads of seats (she wanted to be standing with us lot). If you have the time and put the effort in, they are around.

My tips: keep checking the all dates page of the website (in our case, almost obsessively). When the little orange ticket comes up by the date, it means either there is a ticket/s available now or will be in the next few minutes. This is your time to click on the date, refresh repeatedly and hope for the best... Good luck 🍀

I am not a scammer

sure, staying this makes you a genuine seller 🐶

You think it's a good idea to try to sell tickets through a thread that warns for potential scammers? 😂

As a trader you should know that you can easily sell them through Twickets or Viagogo.

And for all the others: his account is a very good example: a lot of Karma points, 6 years active but he deleted the posting and comment history (for a reason) 😂

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent signaler répondre

Yes, this is another tell as well. u/badbooks17 has the following in their profile:

- 5,459 Karma
- 736 Contributions
- 6 Years on Reddit

Yet they have no visible history in their comments or posts, so they've deleted their entire history. All of it. They can't remove the above stats though, so that's a massive tell.

I've seen a few scammers with this pattern in the last couple of weeks, they're probably compromised accounts.

I have seen one that had history but their account was only one year old and they had no interest in selling tickets up until about a month ago, when they suddenly started listing high value / high demand tickets for a few gigs. Their early posts look like they were trying to karma farm to get to a reasonable level of trust. So a long game scam.

So again, don't bother as 99% on here are scammers.

Messed up in their 2nd sentence. There is no inner circle hospitality at Wembley. All hospitality is in club Wembley Level 2 with VVIP in the tent on the floor. There is front standing as its split for crowd safety not hospitality and these are first come first served.

@leejo

Thanks for your summary of my account. I've been here for 6 years and I very recently decided to hide my posts on my profile because of the sheer number of utter arses on this site. People who will stalk your posting history and bring things up in a totally irrelevant discussion...a bit like your post really. My account was also hacked a few months ago and sending fake nudes to everyone. So I have my reasons.

I dont need to scam anyone. Anyone sensible and not a time waster who would like to buy any tickets I have is most welcome to reach out to me. As I said, I only supply hospitality tickets. With me you get a secure payment link and direct contact with the established UK supplier that I work with. I have plenty of very happy customers 😊

Bollocks mate, if you've got any reputable stuff then show it. It's the day before the event, why are you trying to sell stuff here - because you're taking advantage of those desperate to get tickets.

A secure payment link means nothing, I can set one up with Stripe in about 5mins.
