Oasis Wembley Tickets Bot for Face-value tickets [Sept 22 - Big Update]

[Other] (self.Tickets)

soumis il y a 19 jours par n1xl

Hi all,

This is a follow-up to my August 22 update with the latest news from my tracking bot for Oasis Wembley tickets on Twickets.

How the bot works:

- Checks the official Twickets resale for Oasis gigs
- Sends an instant email if a new listing is found
- Includes a direct link to the listing on Twickets

Big Update to the Bot

Last week I pushed a major update. Instead of only monitoring the Twickets resale pages, the bot now taps into a set of undocumented APIs. This lets me pick up tickets before they even appear on the Twickets website — so alerts now go out much earlier.

I've also streamlined the purchase flow: the alert emails now link you directly to the ticket page, skipping the extra step where you'd normally have to select the listing first. That means you can get to checkout faster.

Latest Tips to Improve Your Chances:

- Log in to Twickets beforehand.
- Move fast when an alert hits your inbox.
- If you see the "tickets are currently being purchased" message, keep the tab open — they can still drop back in.
- A couple of clicks on "Buy" often helps, but don't spam it.

Data for Wembley gigs

For the September Wembley shows, ticket drops have already started, and the pace is increasing as the dates get closer. Each drop usually contains between 1-4 tickets.

Oasis Wembley Ticket Drops

I know Twickets can be frustrating for Oasis fans, but this approach has helped many people secure tickets at face value. Also, please let me know if you were successful :)

This is how alerts look in your inbox:

Hope this helps anyone still hunting!

Hey. I have your alert system and was surprised to get an alert before I could see the ticket on the Twickets Page - nice work. I still haven't been able to purchase which is frustrating as I'm click as soon as the email comes through, literally. I'm less than a second in clicking the Buy button but someone has them. It's happened maybe 5 times now. I'm not sure that you can do anything but wanted to give you my experience. I'm not sure how anyone else could get their faster each time.

I guess their script runs faster than every 10 seconds? That's all I can think of.

Same happens to me. I think bots are buying.

Check out my research here if you have not seen: <https://ticket-alerts.live/blog/whats-going-on-with-twickets-oasis-resale>

To be honest, I'm not sure that there are any other Twicket bots out there that can get the ticket listing faster than what I'm doing right now with the new approach.

There are a few people who are very fast at clicking on the email based on my logs: <https://ibb.co/DHLM3nhQ>

Also, keep in mind that it takes extra time for an email provider to deliver the email to you. Based on my logs, I see that Gmail is 1-2 seconds faster than iCloud & Hotmail on average.

Mainbotpy, and you know that - you've even looked into it in a previous post on your site. And you know that one adds to the basket, against Twickets TOS, so is locking out other users.

In other words your own alerting here, which is going to be inferior due to delay issues in mail relay, is always going to be beaten by the n instances of Mainbotpy that clearly appear to be running: https://www.reddit.com/r/Tickets/comments/1nn0e6k/psa\_dont\_resell\_for\_wembley\_2728\_sep\_on\_twickets/

Yet you continue to charge for your own bot?

Thanks for sharing this. Interesting to read about Mainbotpy. Not sure how I as a human could ever compete with this.

[–] n1xl [S] 0 point il y a 19 jours

With my new approach to monitoring Twickets, I believe our alerts will come much earlier than Mainbotpy ability to spot them. It would be interesting for someone to compare the speed of alerts with Mainbotpy now (i dont have access to their bot). Yes, I am currently claiming to provide the fastest alerts for Twickets - please prove me otherwise.

I will update my own comparison that you are referring to.

[–] leejo 2 points il y a 19 jours

> Yes, I am currently claiming to provide the fastest alerts for Twickets - please prove me otherwise.

You're always going to have delays in mail relay, and that's network latency (remember, the case of the 500 mile email?). Add to that time to open the email, click the link, add to basket? Too late, Mainbotpy has beaten you to it.

Sure, you might have the fastest alerts, but that's not the point - the point is that the other bot is adding them to the basket and locking them up before your email has got through the first SMTP relay.

And you know this, certainly if you've got 15 years in the industry.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent signaler répondre

[–] BubbleAndSqueak88 1 point il y a 19 jours

Agreed. They are 3 steps ahead. The bot hits the link, clicks buy and does the captcha before I'm on the page.

I'm considering buying the bot. It's a punt. If anyone else who is after tickets wants to go in together to try, DM me.

You can actually buy the source code. That might be helpful for you OP.

It matters whether you are monitoring a cached or uncached webpage or endpoint.

I'm quite sure we are monitoring different things between us and the other bot to make the email delay negligible.

[–] leejo 2 points il y a 19 jours

> It matters whether you are monitoring a cached or uncached webpage or endpoint.

The bot will be polling the same unlisted, but public, unprotected endpoints that you are. Twickets need to lock these down - it would be trivial. They also need to implement blacklisting/blocking for those sessions, users, and IPs that add tickets to their basket but don't complete the process (i.e. timeouts).

This would be the first steps to hardening the defence. Not perfect, but better.

They could also implement alerting using a random algorithm - I know they don't want alerts for high value/popular events as it puts unnecessary strain on their servers, but they could fire out 10 alerts at a time, randomly selected from the queue, then send 10 more if the tickets haven't been bought within 10mins. These would keep the tickets unlisted, sending them to a page only linked from the alert.

Again, not perfect, but a step in the right direction.

perma-lien embed enregistrer parent signaler répondre

[\[-\] n1xl \[S\]](#) 1 point il y a 19 jours

IF the local bot is polling the same endpoint with the same params, then yes, it would be faster. I'm claiming that we use different endpoints/params. I've spent time optimizing Twickets monitoring.

Rate limiting protection on Twickets actually exists. So it is protected in some basic ways.

This is all in a context of Twickets - with other websites could be a different story

This is so helpful, thank you - I hadn't seen the article. I would most likely come across as a bot as I was refreshing constantly so I'll slow that down. I'm with Gmail, and I wouldn't be surprised if I'm on a fast list like that so will keep trying - thank you so much. I truly appreciate the service.

I have had the same experience after buying this product a couple of months ago. I have genuinely stopped trying as they are clearly other automated bots grabbing them faster than anyone can manually.

Yes fine when it's half the price. I'm being quite specific here but on say VIP packages and festivals as an example where fees can go up into to £50-£60 and they still market as FV

Hey I signed up to this but I think bots are purchasing the tickets before anyone can because I've( loads of times) had my phone in my hand and clicked it straight away, while logged in to buy and they're instantly gone. Literally within the space of a second or two so I don't think I have any chance really or I don't think there's a point signing up to this because there are definitely bots buying them before anyone else can

How many people precisely have successfully purchased tickets using your software and how many have signed up to use it?

perma-lien embed enregistrer signaler répondre

[–] n1xl [S] 1 point il y a 19 jours

Its impossible to track the success rate unfortunately , apart from people who write thank you after the purchase.

Not a huge number of subscribers. there are going to be more tickets available than the number of subscribers.

Yeah, loads for the 28th are coming up this morning but we need for tonight. I've a 13 match accumulator going, so that's my Plan B, if we wanted to buy overpriced tickets.

Admittedly a long shot.

Yeah the emails are still flying in. Hopefully they dip hugely on reseller sites just before it. Use viagogo dot com not dot uk or dot ie. For some reason they're ch cheaper there

I managed to secure one at FV after about a week of trying! There does seem to be bots that are picking them up quicker and maybe I just got lucky but thank you very much!
